ORDER

In light of the Court's August 15, 2016 order granting Jane Doe's motion to intervene in this matter, the Court will amend the allotment of time for the parties' arguments, which was originally set forth in the Court's July 19, 2016 scheduling order. (Doc. 13.) Counsel for Plaintiff and Third-Party Defendants should be prepared to argue for forty (40) minutes.[1] They will argue first and may reserve up to ten (10) minutes for rebuttal. Next, counsel for Defendants

[1] Because Plaintiff has moved for a preliminary injunction and also will respond, along with Third-Party Defendants, to Jane Doe's motion for preliminary injunction, it will receive 40 instead of 30 minutes for argument.

should be prepared to argue for thirty (30) minutes. Counsel for Jane Doe should then be prepared to argue for thirty (30) minutes. Plaintiff and Third-Party Defendants will then be permitted to use their rebuttal time, if any.

IT IS SO ORDERED.
