Re: Zarda v. Altitude Express, 15-3775

To the Clerk or Case Manager:

I recognized many typographical errors that I corrected in the just now uploaded brief, which adds only 7 words. I have newly certified that number, which is still within the limits granted by Judge Droney, who granted an opening brief up to 15,000 words. The substance of the language was not changed, nor the pagination. (I think the original brief would have been bounced in any case because I did not properly number the thumbnails, and tables of content and authority, I mis-spelled my own co-counsel's first name, and did not provide his street address on the cover). I know it is the custom of this Court to accept corrections of papers with typographical errors, and the original was only filed on Friday. Please file the corrected brief, of which I will send you six copies as soon as possible. My chosen filing date was shortened (as miscalculated) by the Court 19 by days; while I could have asked for an extension, I did not and this undoubtedly contributed to the strictly typographical errors.

If you have any questions or concerns please contact me.

Sincerely,

Gregory Antollino
