The 19,972 signatures below are from parents across the U.S. who signed onto the following statement. (Many also included additional comments of their own.)
Dear President Trump, Administration Officials, and Congress, Put patients first, not discriminatory beliefs! The moms and dads of America stand firmly against sanctioned discrimination under the new proposal by the Department of Health and Human Services (DHHS) which states that no one should be denied medical care or turned away from a hospital when they have urgent health needs and a provider's religious beliefs should never be allowed to interfere. Further, hospitals receiving government funding should never be allowed to base patient care off of religious beliefs instead of what is scientifically and medically recommended.

lmstetzb@mac.com	Jim	Stetz	Gatesburg IN	47738	Any person in the health care profession, who has a problem with carrying out his or her professional obligations, is not required to work in that position. All professions have a code of ethics to which its practitioners are sworn, even when and if it conflicts with their own opinions. No individual's religious or "conscience" beliefs entitle that person to refuse his or her professional obligations, in accordance with the moral judgments determined by that profession over decades of study and reflection. If an individual has a problem with fulfilling a medical duty, such as a provision of birth control pills or the care to gay or lesbian patients without regard to sexuality, that individual is welcome to resign from the job. HHS must not provide a weapon for the systematic deconstruction of medical ethics by smothering the "religious objection" as an opt-out from the ethical code to which that person has sworn an oath.

Everyone working in the healthcare field undergoes years of intense training. They are aware of the jobs' requirements. None of them are hired into an alien work environment. They know what the expectations are. Should an employee fail to adhere to specified protocols, work hours, or procedures established by the hospital, that employee is first reprimanded, then fired if improvement is not noted. Personal beliefs are not an excuse for violating work mandates. If someone is unwilling or unable to adhere to the established rules, he is fired. Religious beliefs are left outside the workplace. The interview process alone thoroughly explains expectations. No healthcare worker is blindsided by some strange requirement. If one can't handle the responsibilities of one's job, they are dismissed. Personal religious beliefs have no place in a medical environment. That person must seek a different job.

Sadly this violates the spirit of the very first Amendment as we not only have the freedom of religion we have the freedom from religion. This means No Doctor, Nurse, Pharmacist has the right to impose their beliefs on a Patient! Health Care is a right not a Privilege! No one has the right under the Constitution to impose their religious values or anyone else. sk46079@gmail.com	Shentay	Sirko	Saint Aguerine	FL	32680	Freedom of religion in this country also includes freedom FROM religion. So no outsider's religious beliefs should be forced on me, that is an affront to my First Amendment right as a citizen of the U.S. And how far would it's legislation go? Would it protect the rights of a nurse who identifies as a Jehovah's Witness and based on their religious beliefs, may not want to administer a blood transfusion? Will there be practitioners who believe in Voodoo who insist on using witch doctoring instead of modern day medical techniques? Could a Muslim refuse to treat a Christian? What about someone who claims that as a Scientist, choosing to HR someone or let them die is in line with their faith? Are all these activities protected under "freedom of religion"? Don't start down this slippery slope. Do something right for a change and use some common sense. Let those entering medical professions know that the ONLY thing they should be concerned with is caring for patients and saving lives. If they have deeply held religious beliefs that may contradict this mission under certain circumstances, then they should choose another career. If they convert to a religion after entering medicine and can no longer perform their duties as a result, then they should switch to another career. Every constitutional right we enjoy as American citizens only protects individuals so long as that right does not infringe on others. And refusing treatment of a patient based solely on the caregiver's religious beliefs is definitely infringement. The people of this country are watching you. jmpfflor@gmail.com	Michael	Tadson		Rock Creek	OH	44084	When it comes to health care, the patient should always come first. But a harmful and discriminatory rule proposed by the Trump Administration is opening the door to widespread discrimination toward women and LGBTQ people. This is unacceptable and unacceptable. The new proposed rule would allow providers (hospitals, doctors, nurses, and other individuals and institutions) to deny patients standard medical care based on the providers' personal beliefs--not based on what is best for the patient. This is a prescription for discrimination! This is outrageous. The personal religious beliefs of health care providers should never determine the care a patient receives. But instead of putting patients first, the Trump administration is trying to overthrow a wide range of individuals and institutions with a license to discriminate, which is putting it lightly. Lives are on the line. The impact of this proposed rule would have far-reaching and yet unforeseen effects by allowing providers to deny patients access to critical care and open the door to widespread discrimination in virtually every part of the health care system. (Can you imagine being denied a birth control prescription because your doctor disapproves of your sex life? Or how about a child being refused dental care because the dentist won't treat a child with two moms? It's time to stand up for fairness.) Why is this important? Because existing refusal of care laws already allow health care providers to put their religious beliefs before patient care. The proposed rule would illegally expand those laws in dangerous new ways by allowing anyone who works in health care to refuse services of all kinds to patients (it also doesn't require the provider to refer patients elsewhere). This rule would mean patients across the country could lose access to critical health care services according to the whims of their provider's personal beliefs. Women will be denied access to standard medical care, especially those in small or rural towns (or who are in an emergency situation) where choices of providers is limited. Women suffering miscarriages can be denied critical treatment; hospitals can refuse to treat or refer someone who needs an abortion; women in need of the morning after pill can be turned away; and even transgender patients can be refused medical care. The Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) under the Trump Administration is up to no good with this proposed rule and they need to hear from YOU about why this rule is harmful and why they should get out of it immediately. No one should be denied medical care or turned away from a hospital when they have urgent health needs. In addition, the proposed rule would sanction taxpayer-funded discrimination by allowing hospitals receiving government funding to deny medical care because of religious beliefs. Thirdly, widespread, taxpayer-funded discrimination toward women and LGBTQ people has no place in the United States of America. Freedom of religion is important, which is why it's already protected by the First Amendment of the Constitution. But that freedom doesn't give any of us the right to hurt people, impose our beliefs on others, or to discriminate--which is what this proposed rule does. The Trump Administration's proposed rule is extremely broad and encourages discrimination toward women and LGBTQ people with sweeping and dangerous exemptions which would allow anyone--even those remotely involved in treatment--to refuse care. This could be something as innocuous as scheduling an appointment for a woman seeking family treatment or serving lunch to a transgender patient in the hospital with the flu. LGBTQ+ patients especially face a disproportionate amount of discrimination and mistreatment at doctors' offices and this rule would codify this shameful behavior. We cannot allow health care providers and institutions to base patient care off of religious beliefs instead of what is scientifically and medically recommended--and, of course, in the best interest of the patient. A provider's religious beliefs should never be allowed to trump the beliefs of their patients, nor should they be allowed to refuse to treat patients in need of care. No one should be able to insert their religious beliefs into someone else's medical decisions. I urge you to protect the American people from this travesty.

janepencer925@gmail.com	Dane	Spanner		Los Angeles	CA	90024	Establishing a religious criteria for patients in order to get treatment from their medical professionals is inequitable, would become extremely complicated, is un-American, and downright insane. If government funding were based on one particular religion's beliefs, then people that don't share those beliefs shouldn't have to contribute their taxes to an institution that isn't even offering services to them: for supporting THEIR beliefs! For religious freedom (and other freedoms) to flourish, tolerance of others is required. Perhaps that is why America maintains a "separation of church and state". This new proposal by HHS does not maintain that separation and is, in some respects, a "public business", they need to be inclusive of everyone. Dividing our businesses into "Republican" and "Democrat" is counterproductive and exacerbates the intolerance that we are experiencing in America. A medical facility should be a place of refuge and protection for all. If one is looking for religious healing, they would go to a church!

We need to change Social security Act to allow compounding pharmacies to use bulk powder of pharma drugs to make drugs that accommodate for those with allergies and intolerances to supposedly from ingredients used in covered insurance drugs under Medicare, but this does not happen despite all the confusing read language given out by Medicare reps on the Medicare phone lines. When appealed, the decisions exclude compounding pharmacies from ANY MEDICARE coverage at all citing some requirement in the USA. This must have another big pharma lobbying win when the legislation was being drafted into a bill that became an act. Big pharma's sweetest: getting rid of its competitors is interfering with patients getting healthy in USA, and it is time to recognize that is why USA spends more on health care with the least results. This is discrimination against competitors by pharma. It goes along with efforts to derail non-pharma covered supplements and nutrition based medicine and homopathy. Religious beliefs of patients should be key to all medical decisions being made. The patient has the Constitutional right to make decisions over their own body. These decisions should be informed medical decisions made with full info by providers not edited by the provider based on the provider's religion that is irrelevant to the patient. Such power of the provider is forcing the provider's religion upon the patient and is ILLEGAL AND UNCONSTITUTIONAL. If the provider can do this, then Satanists can make decisions for Christians and force them on Christians when they are the medical providers because that is their religious beliefs and values. Even if the Christians do not want to do that they will be forced to do that because the provider has the power to annihilate the choices that the Christians wanted. Wake up. Those proposing such ideologies are trying to deliberately destroy America's democracy and freedom to choose over our own bodies.

elijah@en@yahoo.com	Elijah	Wade		Cape Girardeau	MO	63701	We know that the Trump administration is as close to being openly white nationalist as it gets without formally acknowledging as much, but until they do, let's use responsible legislation like this to call them out on it. Bigotry, hatred and discriminatory beliefs are anti-American and should never be codified into law in any form, even masquerading as "religious freedom". Every American is born as an equal according to the constitution and we shall not stay here that should we wish to maintain what integrity we still have. Do not let Trump and his bigoted friends turn back the clock and invite Nazis to discriminate as they see fit - we are better than that!

I once had a small but painful medical problem, knew exactly the care that I needed, but had to deal with the pain every minute for a couple of months while the provider insisted I go through several steps of appointments before I finally was allowed to see the doctor I needed. After months of pain, my doctor visit was maybe 10-15 minutes, the procedure I expected was done, and the problem was cured. If I had been allowed to see the doctor on one visit, months of pain would not have happened and I would not have wasted my time or that of all the previous medical staff. Sheesh!
