

No. 23-1078

In the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit

B.P.J., by her next friend and mother; HEATHER JACKSON, Plaintiffs-Appellants,

v.

WEST VIRGINIA STATE BOARD OF EDUCATION; HARRISON COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION; WEST VIRGINIA SECONDARY SCHOOL ACTIVITIES COMMISSION; W. CLAYTON BURCH, in his official capacity as State Superintendent; and DORA STUTLER, in her official capacity as Harrison County Superintendent,
Defendants-Appellees,

and

THE STATE OF WEST VIRGINIA; LANEY ARMISTEAD, Intervenors-Appellees.

On Appeal from the United States District Court for the Southern District of West Virginia,
No. 2:21-cv-00316 (Goodwin, J.)

AMICUS BRIEF OF PARENTS DEFENDING EDUCATION IN SUPPORT OF APPELLEES AND AFFIRMANCE

J. MICHAEL CONNOLLY
JAMES F. HASSON
CONSOVOY MCCARTHY PLLC
1600 Wilson Boulevard, Suite 700
Arlington, VA 22201
(703) 243-9423
mike@consovoymccarthy.com
Counsel for Parents Defending Education

RULE 26.1 CORPORATE DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

Amicus Curiae Parents Defending Education hereby certifies that it has no parent company and no publicly held corporation owns 10% or more of its stock.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Rule 26.1 Corporate Disclosure Statementi

Table of Authoritiesiii

Interest of Amicus Curiae..... 1

Summary of Argument2

Argument.....4

I. The Supreme Court’s decision in Bostock v. Clayton County does not authorize schools to condition eligibility for women’s athletics on gender identity instead of biological sex4

Conclusion.....13

Certificate of Compliance14

Certificate of Service14

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

Cases

Adams by & through Kasper v. Sch. Bd. of St. Johns Cnty. , 57 F.4th 791 (11th Cir. 2022) (en banc)	3, 5, 9
Bear Creek Bible Church v. Equal Emp. Opportunity Comm’n , 571 F. Supp. 3d 571 (N.D. Tex. 2021)	9
Bostock v. Clayton County , 140 S. Ct. 1731 (2020)	3, 4, 8, 9, 10, 12
Clark, By & Through Clark v. Arizona Interscholastic Ass’n , 695 F.2d 1126 (9th Cir. 1982)	2
Conley v. Nw. Fla. State College , 145 F. Supp. 3d 1073 (N.D. Fl. 2015)	6
Frontiero v. Richardson , 411 U.S. 677 (1973)	5
Grimm v. Gloucester County School Board , 972 F.3d 586 (4th Cir. 2020)	3, 11, 12, 13
Hurlburt v. Black , 925 F.3d 154 (4th Cir. 2019)	12
Muro v. Bd. of Supervisors of Louisiana State Univ. & Agric. & Mech. Coll. , 2019 WL 5810308 (E.D. La. Nov. 7, 2019)	6
Neese v. Becerra , --- F. Supp. 3d ---, 2022 WL 16902425 (N.D. Tex. Nov. 11, 2022)	12
Pelcha v. MW Bancorp, Inc. , 988 F.3d 318 (6th Cir. 2021)	9
Tennessee v. United States Dep’t of Educ. , 2022 WL 2791450 (E.D. Tenn. July 15, 2022)	9

Util. Air Regul. Grp. v. E.P.A. , 573 U.S. 302 (2014)	5
--	---

Wis. Cent. Ltd. v. United States , 138 S. Ct. 2067 (2018)	5
--	---

Statutes

20 U.S.C. §1681 , et seq.	4
---	---

20 U.S.C. §1681(a)(2)	5
--	---

20 U.S.C. §1681(a)(8)	5
--	---

20 U.S.C. §1682	6
--	---

Pub. L. 93-380, §844, 88 Stat 484 (Aug. 21, 1974)	4
--	---

Regulations

34 C.F.R. §106.33	6
--	---

34 C.F.R. §106.40(b)(1)	6
--	---

34 C.F.R. §106.41	2
--	---

34 C.F.R. §106.41(a)	4
---	---

34 C.F.R. §106.41(b)	6, 7
---	------

Other Authorities

Deborah Brake, The Struggle for Sex Equality in Sport and the Theory Behind Title IX , 34 U. Mich. J. L. Reform 13 (2000)	1
---	---

Beth A. Brooke-Marciniak & Donna de Varona, Amazing Things Happen When You Give Female Athletes the Same Funding as Men , World Econ. F. (Aug. 25, 2016), https://bit.ly/3LSqCle	2
---	---

Doriane Lambelet Coleman, et al., Re-affirming the Value of the Sports Exception to Title IX's General Non-Discrimination Rule , 27 Duke J. Gender L. & Pol'y 69 (2020)	7
--	---

H.B. 3293..... 2, 7

U.S. Department of Education, Office of Civil Rights, Letter to Kim Mooney (Oct. 16, 2020), <https://bit.ly/3LU4cjr> 11

U.S. Dep’t of Educ. Office for Civil Rights, Memorandum re: Bostock v. Clayton Cnty. (Jan. 8, 2021), <https://bit.ly/3AsVNw0> 10

INTEREST OF *AMICUS CURIAE*¹

Parents Defending Education (“PDE”) is a nationwide, grassroots membership organization consisting largely of parents of school-aged children. PDE’s mission is to prevent the politicization of K-12 education, including government attempts to limit personal and professional developmental opportunities for female students in service to radical ideologies. PDE furthers this mission through network and coalition building, disclosure of harmful school policies, advocacy, and, if necessary, litigation.

This case directly implicates PDE’s mission, and its outcome will have real-world consequences for PDE’s members. Title IX was enacted to prevent discrimination against and ensure equal opportunities for female students. By any metric, it has been wildly successful in achieving that purpose. Over the past five decades, Title IX has “precipitated a virtual revolution for girls and women in sports” and spurred “significant increases in athletic participation” at “all levels of education.” Deborah Brake, The Struggle for Sex Equality in Sport and the Theory Behind Title IX, 34 U. Mich. J. L. Reform 13, 15 (2000). Indeed, “the number of girls playing high school sports [increased] from one in twenty-seven” in 1972 to “one in three” by 2000. Id.

This new era of opportunity has provided measurable benefits for adolescent girls and their families. “Girls who play sports stay in school longer, suffer fewer health problems, enter the labor force at higher rates, and are more likely to land better jobs. They are also more likely to lead.” Beth A. Brooke-Marciniak & Donna de Varona, Amazing Things Happen When You Give Female Athletes the Same Funding as Men, World Econ. F. (Aug. 25, 2016), <https://bit.ly/3LSqCle>.

¹ This brief was not authored in whole or in part by counsel for a party. No person other than the amicus made a monetary contribution intended to fund the preparation or submission of this brief.

Enjoining H.B. 3293 will reverse this progress by effectively eliminating single-sex athletics throughout the state. By conditioning eligibility for girls’ sports based on a student’s biological sex rather than their internal perception of gender, the law upholds Title IX’s guarantee of “equal athletic opportunity for members of both sexes.” 34 C.F.R. §106.41 (emphasis added). Federal courts and common-sense observers have long recognized that, “due to average physiological differences, males [will] displace females to a substantial extent if they [are] allowed to compete” in women’s sports, and that “athletic opportunities for women [will] be diminished” as a result. Clark, By & Through Clark v. Arizona Interscholastic Ass’n, 695 F.2d 1126, 1131 (9th Cir. 1982). That is exactly what will continue to happen to female athletes in West Virginia and across the Fourth Circuit if Appellant prevails.

SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

Congress passed Title IX to ensure that female students in the United States could access the same benefits and opportunities enjoyed by male students. As one might expect, Title IX recognizes two categories of students: males and females. Consistent with its purpose, the law repeatedly speaks about benefits provided by “one sex” versus “the other sex,” and sometimes references “both sexes.” Title IX, by its very nature, is comparative: it requires school administrators—and the courts overseeing them—to compare the opportunities afforded to one group with the opportunities afforded to another.

It is impossible to compare two things, however, if neither has a verifiable definition. The issue before the Court in this case is straightforward: what did Congress mean when it required equal treatment for members of each “sex”? Appellant tries to sidestep this question by invoking the Supreme Court’s decision in Bostock v. Clayton County, 140 S. Ct. 1731 (2020), and Grimm v. Gloucester County School Board, 972 F.3d 586 (4th Cir. 2020). See Appellant’s Br. 47. But Bostock interpreted a different statute—with a different structure and different purpose—and the Court specifically disavowed that its reasoning was controlling for Title IX purposes. And while Grimm applied Bostock to a discrete issue in the Title IX context, the Court’s reasons for doing so are inapplicable to this case.

The plain text, structure, history, and purpose of Title IX all point to one conclusion: that “sex” refers to biological and inalterable differences between males and females, and the law protects athletic competitions that are separated on that basis. As the Eleventh Circuit recently observed, “[t]here simply is no alternative definition of ‘sex’ for transgender persons as compared to nontransgender persons under Title IX.” Adams by & through Kasper v. Sch. Bd. of St. Johns Cnty., 57 F.4th 791, 813-14 (11th Cir. 2022) (en banc). Because West Virginia’s policy provides equal opportunities for both sexes, it is permissible under—and, in fact, required by—Title IX. The district court’s decision should be affirmed.

ARGUMENT

I. The Supreme Court’s decision in Bostock v. Clayton County does not authorize schools to condition eligibility for women’s athletics on gender identity instead of biological sex.

Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 prohibits educational institutions that receive federal funds from excluding, denying the benefits of a program or activity, or otherwise discriminating against individuals “on the basis of sex.” 20 U.S.C. §1681, et seq.

While Title IX does not itself mention sports, its implementing regulations clarify that the law’s protections extend to student athletics. See 34 C.F.R. §106.41(a) (“No person shall, on the basis of sex, be excluded from participation in ... any interscholastic, intercollegiate, club or intramural athletics.”). Importantly, Congress specifically mandated the creation of those regulations only two years after it enacted Title IX. In 1974, Congress passed the Javits Amendment, which directed the Department of Education to promulgate rules “implementing the provisions of Title IX,” including “reasonable provisions considering the nature of the particular sports.” Pub. L. 93-380, §844, 88 Stat 484 (Aug. 21, 1974). To ensure that the Department fulfilled Title IX’s purpose, the Javits Amendment stated that Congress would review the sports-related regulations to assess whether they were “inconsistent with the Act from which [they] derive[] [their] authority.” Id.

Put simply, Title IX requires any school that receives federal funds to provide equal athletic opportunities to students of each sex. Basic canons of statutory interpretation leave no doubt that Title IX's use of the term "sex" refers to a binary classification based on biological differences between males and females. To parse the meaning of a statute, courts must "interpret [its] words consistent with their ordinary meaning at the time Congress enacted the statute." Wis. Cent. Ltd. v. United States, 138 S. Ct. 2067, 2070 (2018) (cleaned up). The "overwhelming majority of dictionaries" when Title IX was enacted "define[d] 'sex' on the basis of biology and reproductive function." Adams, 57 F.4th at 812 (listing definitions from six contemporary dictionaries); see also Frontiero v. Richardson, 411 U.S. 677, 686 (1973) ("[S]ex, like race and national origin, is an immutable characteristic determined solely by the accident of birth." (emphasis added)).

This straightforward interpretation is also supported by other sections of the law. See Util. Air Regul. Grp. v. E.P.A., 573 U.S. 302, 321 (2014) ("[R]easonable statutory interpretation must account for both the specific context in which language is used and the broader context of the statute as a whole." (cleaned up)). Section 1681(a)(2), for instance, distinguishes between "institution[s] which admit[] only students of one sex" and "institution[s] which admit[] students of both sexes." 20 U.S.C. §1681(a)(2) (emphasis added). Section 1681(a)(8) likewise refers to sex in binary terms. Under that provision, if father-son or mother-daughter activities are provided for "one sex," then reasonably comparable activities must be provided for "the other sex." §1681(a)(8).

A common-sense understanding of “sex” under Title IX is also reinforced by the law’s implementing regulations. For example, Title IX regulations specify that discrimination against a student “on the basis of pregnancy” constitutes discrimination “on the basis of sex.” 34 C.F.R. §106.40\(b\)\(1\); see 20 U.S.C. §1682. Federal courts have recognized this rule as a valid corollary to Title IX’s ban on sex-based discrimination, based on the understanding that “sex” refers to “the ‘structural’ and ‘functional’ differences between male and female bodies.” Conley v. Nw. Fla. State College, 145 F. Supp. 3d 1073, 1077 (N.D. Fl. 2015); see also Muro v. Bd. of Supervisors of Louisiana State Univ. & Agric. & Mech. Coll., 2019 WL 5810308, at *3 (E.D. La. Nov. 7, 2019) (“[A]n adverse action taken against a student on the basis of pregnancy or pregnancy-related conditions is taken because of her sex.” (emphasis original)). Indeed, the reference to “sex” in this context could not possibly contemplate gender identity because biological males are incapable of pregnancy no matter how they identify. Mirroring the language contained in the statute itself, Title IX regulations also frequently refer to sex in binary and biological terms. See, e.g., 34 C.F.R. §106.33 (authorizing “separate toilet, locker room, and shower facilities on the basis of sex” but specifying that “such facilities provided for students of one sex shall be comparable to such facilities provided to students of the other sex”).

Title IX regulations also contain a provision authorizing sex-specific competitions when “contact sports” are involved. 34 C.F.R. §106.41\(b\). The regulations define “contact sports” to include boxing, football, and any “other sports the purpose or major activity of which involves bodily contact.” Id. The wisdom of this rule is intuitive if “sex” refers to biological characteristics. But separating contact sports by sex makes no sense if “sex” is unmoored from physical differences and determined entirely by each student’s internal sense of their gender. If Title IX’s protections turned on a particular student’s self-identification instead of his or her physical attributes, limiting participation in contact sports to one group but not the other would make no sense.²

Based on this overwhelming evidence, the legal conclusion here is straightforward: Title IX and its attendant regulations require schools to provide equal opportunities to male and female student athletes; the equality of those opportunities is evaluated in the context of biological sex; and H.B. 3293 upholds that standard because it delineates eligibility for girls’ athletic competitions based on physiological factors—the only relevant metric in the athletic context. See, e.g., Doriane Lambelet Coleman, et al., Re-affirming the Value of the Sports Exception to Title IX’s General Non-Discrimination Rule, 27 Duke J. Gender L. & Pol’y 69, 87–88 (2020) (“[I]t is neither myth nor outdated stereotype that there are inherent differences between those born male and those born female and that those born male, including transgender women and girls, have physiological advantages in many sports.”).

² By way of example, an elite male lacrosse player can shoot a lacrosse ball between 80-95 miles-per-hour. For this reason, goalies in men’s lacrosse games wear helmets and chest protectors to prevent serious injury from projectiles flying towards them at 130 feet-per-second. An elite female lacrosse player, by contrast, shoots the same ball at least 20-30 miles-per-hour slower. Thus, goalies in female lacrosse games have no need for head and chest protection and only wear protective eyeglasses. If Appellant prevails, however, a 14-year-old female lacrosse goalie with no protective equipment could be forced to stare down high-velocity shots from a 17-year-old, biologically male competitor.

Contra Appellant, the Supreme Court’s decision in Bostock v. Clayton County changes none of this. In Bostock, the Court held that discrimination “because of sex” under Title VII prohibited employers from terminating employees because of their transgender status. See 140 S. Ct. 1731, 1739 (2020). The Court “agree[d] that homosexuality and transgender status are distinct concepts from sex,” but it concluded that firing employees “based on homosexuality or transgender status” still triggers Title VII’s protections because the employer’s action “necessarily entails” a decision “made in part because of the affected individuals’ sex.” Id. at 1746-47. The Court’s decision thus rested on the premise that sex is binary and immutable, and that an employee’s biological sex is a necessary component of any determination about whether “discrimination because of sex” has occurred under Title VII. Put differently, whether an adverse action against a transgender employee violates Title VII under Bostock depends not on the specific nature of the employee’s gender identity but instead on how the employer treats the employee as compared to other employees of the same biological sex.

Bostock’s reasoning is inapplicable to this case for at least four reasons. First, the Court “proceed[ed] on the assumption that ‘sex’ ... refer[red] only to biological distinctions between male and female.” Id. at 1739. Second, “[t]he Bostock decision only addressed sex discrimination under Title VII; the Supreme Court expressly declined to ‘prejudge’ how its holding would apply to ‘other federal or state laws that prohibit sex discrimination’ such as Title IX.” Tennessee v. United States Dep’t of Educ., 2022 WL 2791450, at *15 (E.D. Tenn. July 15, 2022) (quoting Bostock, 140 S. Ct. at 1753). Third, Title IX and its implementing regulations contain several carve-outs specific to biological sex that are not present in Title VII. Finally, Title IX’s application to single-sex athletics does not involve the “but-for causation” factor underlying the Court’s narrow ruling in Bostock.

For this reason, several federal courts have recognized that “the rule in Bostock extends no further than Title VII.” Pelcha v. MW Bancorp, Inc., 988 F.3d 318, 324 (6th Cir. 2021); see also Bear Creek Bible Church v. Equal Emp. Opportunity Comm’n, 571 F. Supp. 3d 571, 621 (N.D. Tex. 2021) (similar). For example, the Eleventh Circuit recently rejected a Title IX challenge to a school district policy requiring students to use bathrooms based on their biological sex, rather than their gender identity. See Adams, 57 F.4th at 811. In the process, the en banc court held that Bostock’s reasoning was inapplicable in the Title IX context. See id. (“We cannot, as the Supreme Court did in Bostock, decide only whether discrimination based on transgender status necessarily equates to discrimination on the basis of sex.”). Bostock was distinguishable, the court held, “because Title IX, unlike Title VII, includes express statutory and regulatory carve-outs for differentiating between the sexes.” Id. The Eleventh Circuit noted that if Title IX’s reference to “‘sex’ were ambiguous enough to include ‘gender identity,’” then those “carve-out[s], as well as the various carveouts under the implementing regulations, would be rendered meaningless.” Id. at 813.

The Department of Education also evaluated Title IX's scope in the immediate aftermath of Bostock and concluded that the Court's decision did not change the decades-long consensus that Title IX's protections are grounded in biological sex. In a January 2021 memorandum, the Department reiterated that its "longstanding construction of the term 'sex' in Title IX to mean biological sex, male or female, is the only construction consistent with the ordinary public meaning of 'sex' at the time of Title IX's enactment." U.S. Dep't of Educ. Office for Civil Rights, Memorandum re: Bostock v. Clayton Cnty., 1 (Jan. 8, 2021), <https://bit.ly/3AsVNw0> ("Bostock Memo"). The Department noted that "Title IX text is very different from Title VII text in many important respects." Id. Like the Sixth and Eleventh Circuits and other federal courts, the Bostock Memo also pointedly observed that the Supreme Court "decided [Bostock] narrowly, specifically refusing to extend its holding to Title IX and other differently drafted statutes." Id. The Bostock Memo emphasized that "[u]nder Title IX and its regulations, a person's biological sex is relevant for the considerations involving athletics, and distinctions based thereon are permissible." Id. at 7 (emphasis original). The Department further specified that "schools must consider students' biological sex when determining whether male and female student athletes have equal opportunities to participate." Id. (emphasis added).

The January 2021 Bostock Memo was consistent with the Department's other pronouncements in 2020. On October 16, 2020, for instance, the Department Office of Civil Rights settled a complaint against Franklin Pierce University, which had alleged that the University violated Title IX by “den[ying] female student-athletes equal athletic benefits and opportunities by permitting transgender athletes to participate in women’s intercollegiate athletic teams.” U.S. Department of Education, Office of Civil Rights, Letter to Kim Mooney, 1 (Oct. 16, 2020), <https://bit.ly/3LU4cjr>. The settlement agreement required the University “to rescind the Policy [and] cease any and all practices related thereto.” Id. at 6. The terms of the settlement notwithstanding, the Department took the opportunity to make its views known:

[I]f Bostock’s reasoning under Title VII were applied to policies regarding single-sex sports teams under Title IX, it would confirm that the Department’s regulations authorize single-sex teams only based on biological sex. In Bostock, the Court took the position that “homosexuality and transgender status are inextricably bound up with sex,” such that “when an employer fires an employee for being homosexual or transgender, it necessarily and intentionally discriminates against that individual in part because of sex.” Under that logic, special exceptions from single-sex sports teams based on homosexuality or transgender status would themselves generally constitute unlawful sex discrimination, because homosexuality and transgender status are not physiological differences relevant to the separation of sports teams based on sex. In other words, if Bostock applies, it would require that a male student-athlete who identifies as female not be treated better or worse than other male student-athletes. If the school offers separate-sex teams, the male student-athlete who identifies as female must play on the male team, just like any other male student-athlete.

Id. at 5 (emphasis added).

This Court’s 2-1 decision in Grimm is not to the contrary. Grimm involved an as-applied challenge to a school district policy requiring a transgender student to use school bathrooms that aligned with the student’s biological sex. 972 F.3d at 616. The Court held that the policy violated Title IX because the plaintiff “was treated worse than students” who were similarly situated, “because [the plaintiff] alone could not use the restroom corresponding with [the plaintiff’s] gender.” Id. at 618. Grimm never discussed Title IX in the unique circumstance of intramural athletics, which—more than any other issue—are inextricably intertwined with physical realities that are concrete and measurable. To the contrary, the court merely cited Bostock for the proposition that “discrimination ‘means treating an individual worse than others who are similarly situated.’” Id. (cleaned up).

Bostock, however, turned on the majority’s finding that “an individual employee’s sex is not relevant” to their employment. 140 S. Ct. at 1741 (emphasis added). That reasoning simply does not apply to single-sex sports under Title IX, which was enacted precisely because sex is relevant to athletics. Thus, to the extent that Grimm purported to apply Bostock’s reasoning, but see Neese v. Becerra, --- F. Supp. 3d ---, 2022 WL 16902425, at *6 (N.D. Tex. Nov. 11, 2022) (describing the panel’s “scant analysis”), the court’s decision in that case is distinguishable.³

³ If the Court disagrees and finds that Grimm controls, then it should revisit that decision en banc and overrule it. As explained above, any outcome in this case that is dictated by Grimm would be plainly incompatible with Title IX’s plain meaning. Moreover, to the extent that Grimm found the meaning of “sex” under Title IX to be ambiguous, see 972 F.3d at 618, the legislative history detailed above should have removed all doubts that “sex” refers to biological differences, see Hurlburt v. Black, 925 F.3d 154, 164 (4th Cir. 2019) (looking to legislative history for guidance when the meaning of a statutory term is ambiguous).

Indeed, applying Grimm's reductive "but-for" test to school sports would mean that a school somehow violates Title IX by excluding students from a sex-specific athletic league that is authorized by Title IX itself. If that is the case, then Title IX is meaningless, and the congressional promise of equal opportunities for members of each sex has been illusory from the start. In sum, nothing in the text, history, or implementing regulations of Title IX contemplates sports separated by gender identity rather than biological sex.

CONCLUSION

This Court should affirm the district court's order granting summary judgment to Appellees.

Dated: May 3, 2023

Respectfully Submitted,

/s/ J. Michael Connolly

J. MICHAEL CONNOLLY

JAMES F. HASSON

CONSOVOY MCCARTHY PLLC

1600 Wilson Boulevard, Suite 700

(703) 243-9423

mike@consovoymccarthy.com

james@consovoymccarthy.com

Counsel for Parents Defending Education

CERTIFICATE OF COMPLIANCE

This brief complies with Rule 32(a)(7)(B) because it contains 3,288 words, excluding the parts that can be excluded. This brief also complies with Rule 32(a)(5)-(6) because it has been prepared in a proportionally spaced face using Microsoft Word 2016 in 14-point Garamond font.

Dated: May 3, 2023

/s/ J. Michael Connolly

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I filed this brief with the Court via ECF, which will email everyone requiring notice.

Dated: May 3, 2023

/s/ J. Michael Connolly

UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE FOURTH CIRCUIT
APPEARANCE OF COUNSEL FORM

BAR ADMISSION & ECF REGISTRATION: If you have not been admitted to practice before the Fourth Circuit, you must complete and return an Application for Admission before filing this form. If you were admitted to practice under a different name than you are now using, you must include your former name when completing this form so that we can locate you on the attorney roll. Electronic filing by counsel is required in all Fourth Circuit cases. If you have not registered as a Fourth Circuit ECF Filer, please complete the required steps at Register for eFiling.

THE CLERK WILL ENTER MY APPEARANCE IN APPEAL NO. 23-1078 as

☒ Retained ☐ Court-appointed(CJA) ☐ CJA associate ☐ Court-assigned(non-CJA) ☐ Federal Defender

☐ Pro Bono ☐ Government

COUNSEL FOR: Parents Defending Education

as the (party name)

☐ appellant(s) ☐ appellee(s) ☐ petitioner(s) ☐ respondent(s) ☒ amicus curiae ☐ intervenor(s) ☐ movant(s)

/s/ J. Michael Connolly

(signature)

Please compare your information below with your information on PACER. Any updates or changes must be made through PACER's Manage My Account.

J. Michael Connolly

Name (printed or typed)

703-243-9423

Voice Phone

Consovoy McCarthy PLLC

Firm Name (if applicable)

Fax Number

1600 Wilson Blvd., Ste. 700

Arlington, VA 22209

Address

mike@consovoymccarthy.com

E-mail address (print or type)

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE (required for parties served outside CM/ECF): I certify that this document was served on _____ by ☐ personal delivery; ☐ mail; ☐ third-party commercial carrier; or ☐ email (with written consent) on the following persons at the addresses or email addresses shown:

Signature

Date